ROBERTS OCHOA A A FINANCIAL WRECK

Pending Definite Information Three of His Friends Are Restrained of Their Liberty.

Roberto Ochoa, through an over-indulgence in vino colorado and a too intimate association with men and women of questionable character, found himself early Tuesday morning in a state of entire financial collapse. He was not only without money but a cheap watch and a gold finger ring which he carried in his watch pocket were also gone. Aside from the ring and the watch his shortage amounted to $107.50 which disappeared in a manner that could be explained in no way except by directing suspicion toward his most intimate friends. This wealth was in a purse that is now only a memory and he had an additional 75 cents in another pocket which the thieves overlooked, that he used for more vino colorado to soothe his wounded spirits.

The situation was explained to Justice P. P. Parker and Constable Ivy and as a result of their efforts a matron named Jesus Baldenegro and a reputed co-worker by the name of Ramon Valenzuela were given a preliminary examination yesterday and held to answer to the grand jury in the sum of $500 which bond has not been forthcoming. A third person who was summoned as a witness in their behalf and who came unwillingly, was at the conclusion of the examination taken into custody as either a principal or an accessory and will be given an examination when his attorney announces a convenient session. There may be others who belong to the same lodge and Constable Ivy has his ears open, listening for the careless use of the password. And it all came about this way:

Roberto Ochoa is a middle-aged man of strong physique, though he is suffering from a mild form of paralysis which makes him nervous and interferes with his naturally agile movements. He is also quite partial to wine, when it can be secured, the red variety preferred. He came down from Florence last Sunday with about $150 in his purse. On Monday he began to indulge his appetite and during the afternoon he called on Jesus Baldenegro. The visit lasted until evening when she suggested that they go down to Salt River and enjoy the "surf." He was agreed and she asked him for a dollar with which to rent a horse and buggy.

It was produced and while she went after the buggy he took occasion to count his money in order to ascertain how well it was holding out, and found he had just $107.50 in the purse and 75 cents in another pocket. Returning with the buggy Jesus insisted that they should be chaperoned by a trusted friend, one Joaquin Valencia, who, by the way, was the unwilling witness mentioned above. Ochoa demurred at first but finally consented and the trio drove to the river in the shades of twilight. Joaquin testifies that Jesus and Ochoa had their swim but he did not care to bathe though as he had labored hard in the brick yard all day he took off his shoes and washed his feet and his head.

The first discovery of anything irregular was when Jesus and Ochoa emerged from the water and the latter saw his watch lying on the ground nearby, and asked Joaquin to hand it to him, which he did, this being Joaquin's recital. It was then long past midnight, the water having been so inviting they had tarried unseasonably long. Starting home they had not gone more than 200 yards until they overtook Ramon Valenzuela and the party came up the suburban road to the residence of a mutual friend, one Francisco Franco, midway between the river and Phoenix.

Here they tarried for yet another hour or so during which Ochoa discovered that his wallet was gone. He was yet convivial having had a bottle of wine along on the river side, and though the purse was missing he found the other 75 cents which he sent by a messenger for more wine. On disposing of it he sought repose but had nowhere to lay his head and no money to buy a place so Francisco Franco arranged a pallet for him in the open and he retired while the other friends came on to town.

The next day the full appreciation of his poverty dawned upon him and suspecting that there were other ways of losing money than through a hole in his pocket he appealed to the law. It would appear that Jesus Baldenegro was the author of the conspiracy but the actual theft seems to rest between Ramon and Joaquin. If the latter's story be true it is likely Ramon went through Ochoa's clothes, took the money and dropped the watch during the several hours in which Joaquin was washing his feet. Otherwise Joaquin may have been the man with deft fingers and Ramon an innocent victim, though his near presence at that lonely spot at such an unseasonable hour is hard to account for. Again, it appears that Ochoa did not know of his loss until he arrived at Francisco's home in which case he may have been "touched" by some of them on the way up from the river. He says he remembers that at one time, one of them dealt him a rather stinging blow on the arm while he was in the buggy and it is not impossible it was done to divert his attention from more important operations in the vicinity of his pocket.

ANNOUNCING ENGAGEMENT.

Amanda, Ithaca, N. Y.: If you want a new way of announcing an engagement, try the following, which has never been used so far as the writer knows. Give to each guest the letters comprising the names of the engaged couple and ask them to spell the names. Or on a prettily decorated paper hand write the names with letters transposed and ask the guests to construct the names.

SCHOOL COSTUMES FOR GIRLS.

The school costumes worn by many young girls show a great lack of regard as to the rules of health. Most of the dresses are comfortable, allowing the body freedom of action. But imagine a healthy young girl who should be having her share of exercise wearing high-heeled shoes which make continued walks impossible. Then, too, many girls wear thin soled shoes even in damp weather, regardless of the effect of damp feet. Their hair is loaded down with ribbons, combs and rats. The school girl should be untrammelled by fashion, that her body may be permitted to grow strong.

Future Ideas

"Say! Have you been reading those link ads of Mr. Watt's in all three papers? If not, you should hunt them up and see what they say about KENSINGTON PLACE, corner of Seventh Avenue, North, and McKinley Street."

"I have not. Will you please tell me something about them?"
"This is a synopsis. There will be a street car line within two blocks of KENSINGTON PLACE (not too far or too near, but just the right distance). The city is growing rapidly towards it. The ranches are fixing their eyes upon it and, in fact, all of us are nearly crazy about it and we are anxiously waiting for it to be laid out into lots so that our ideas may be carried out."
